CLUBHOUSE NAVIGATOR

My friend Deborah shares her experience on this app:

A Share from a CH Community Member: When the Universe Pings You

There was a time when Clubhouse truly annoyed me with all its pings and invites. Those notifications could be overwhelming.

My first experience with Clubhouse was in 2020 when I was invited by a friend. (You had to be invited to use the app) I downloaded the app, made a profile, and went to one or two rooms. Honestly, at the time I did not see the point.

One day, while visiting my chiropractor in Los Angeles, I was reading an email in the waiting room and I got one of those annoying Clubhouse notifications. I accidentally hit the notification button and boom—when they come in, they come in hot—my phone began talking very loudly in the doctor's waiting room.

Remember, I was new to the app and had been invited to only a couple of rooms. I was not familiar with the app's notifications or how to turn them off.

I was in the waiting room and I kept saying "I am so sorry" to the people who were sitting in this quiet area while I was trying to figure out how to get out of this room or shut these people up! I was mortified.

I had no clue how to use the app, and at the time everyone's tolerance was low because of their frustration with COVID. Suddenly I figured it out: I had to leave the room!

Then I turned off the app's notifications and that was it: no more Clubhouse!

In October 2022, I decided to revisit the app to see if it would be a good way for me to connect with others and start a room for recovery/healing.

It was not long before I was roaming the halls and joining clubs and becoming part of the solution.

Now I have an understanding of the app and have met some beautiful souls. I started a club, Deb's Den Recovery/Addiction Club, and even though I have had only a few rooms, I have completely fallen in love with this platform.

Anything new takes time. My first go was at a time of frustration and not wanting to take the time to learn the app. When I took the time to explore and, yes, make mistakes, I got good fast.

I have found a new favorite social media app for connection, voicing my opinion on several topics, and being of service.

There are a lot of mindset rooms and a lot of clubs that want your money.

To each his own.

However, I am there for the sole purpose of recovery and to be of service.

Some of the rooms are fun too. I for the most part stay away from politics or news rooms. They don't match my brand.

Every once in a while, I will go to support the club!

In three months, I have been asked to be a guest speaker in three different clubs, I have co-moderated a few rooms, and I have been on stages with business moguls, life coaches, and celebrities.

Where else but Clubhouse can you connect and have a conversation with some of your favorite celebrities?

Please come and join me on a healing journey and connect in Deb's Den!

Follow me, Deborah Driggs, and click the bell by my name and set notifications to "always."
